RECOMMENDATIONS

After due consideration of all the circumstances, the Committee makes the following recommendations:

1. Because of the varied situations in which artificial respiration may be employed, the Committee is of the opinion that instruction in this life-saving measure should not be restricted to one method merely because it is easy for the operator to use.

2. All camp counsellors, first aid instructors, firemen, policemen and mine rescue crews should be familiar with the three push-pull methods outlined.

3. The method which provides the greatest possible respiratory exchange should be begun with the least possible delay. Neither ease of application nor fatigue of the operator should be considered during the crucial first five minutes. If the patient shows signs of life and cardiac function returns, a method requiring less effort may then be substituted if any further artificial respiration is needed.

A LIST OF NEW BOOKS ADDED TO THE ACADEMY LIBRARY

The list of "Recent Accessions to the Library" which has hitherto been published in the Bulletin of The New York Academy of Medicine will cease to appear there hereafter. Instead, it will be issued in mimeographed form and will be available to Fellows of the Academy and to other libraries on request. Applications to be placed on its mailing-list should be made to the Librarian.
